

BEDFORD GAZETTE.

BEDFORD, PA., FRIDAY, AUGUST 5, 1904.

ESTABLISHED IN 1805

VOL. 99.

ROBERT E. PATTISON.

Pennsylvania's Distinguished Son Has Fallen.

THE STATE MOURNS.

Twice Elected Governor of Pennsylvania. He Served the People Faithfully and Well—His Public Record.

Robert E. Pattison, one of the brainiest statesmen, one of the noblest men and one of the most highly esteemed citizens of the country, died at his home at Overbrook, near Philadelphia, Monday morning at 7:30 o'clock. The end came after a protracted struggle, in which the distinguished patient's first will did not prevail. It was against death long after the attending physician had abandoned hope. Early on Sunday Mr. Pattison's illness, pneumonia, aggravated by a heart attack, took a sudden turn for the worse, but, with characteristic energy, he rallied from a series of relapses until his strength was completely spent. A lung pneumonia was the immediate cause of death. Mr. Pattison was indirectly a victim of overwork in connection with the recent Democratic national convention.

Sketch of His Life.

In the last quarter of a century no Democrat has had so commanding a figure in Pennsylvania as has Robert Emory Pattison, and no man has been more successful in politics. His several successful campaigns in the public life of Philadelphia and Pennsylvania attracted to him the attention of the nation and in at least two presidential campaigns his name was syn-

A SOLID PHALANX.

The Democratic Party Is United and Hopeful of Success.

SOME HEAVY TASKS.

Will Be Assigned to Bryan During the Campaign—New York Will Give a Telling Party for Parker and Davis.

educia and in July, 1887, became president of the Chestnut Street National bank. President Cleveland appointed him in 1887 one of the three commissioners to investigate the Pacific railroad. Disagreeing with his two colleagues in the outcome of this work, Pattison submitted a minority report, which was adopted, and then refused to be an end to the partnership between the government and the Pacific railroads—a speedy and absolute divorce.

The forcing of a particularly objectionable candidate, George W. Davis, upon the Republican party in 1890, made a decided turning point in Pattison's political career. He saw great opportunity in the state. He was the only winner on the Democratic slate ticket in N.-J.

In 1892 the Pennsylvania delegation was bound by the rule unit to support Pattison, the predominant hope of the party which he was. Up to the time of his death Mr. Pattison was president of the Security Trust company. He was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal church. In 1872 he was married to Miss Anna Dryden Smith. They have had three daughters, one son, who died at six months, and his father's first term as governor. In 1890 he was again elected as a candidate for vice-president to go on the ticket with Bryan.

In 1892, for the third time, Mr. Pattison became his party's candidate for governor. This seven weeks' tour of the state done by him, in his sedan chair, followed, lost his physical condition much impaired appearance and for many months prior to the St. Louis national convention his health was evidently declining. In the state the Republican gubernatorial nominee, Judge Pennsylvania, received 593,035 votes and Pattison 430,675.

Ex-Governor Pattison was a delegate-at-large to the recent Democratic national convention. He represented Pennsylvania upon the platform committee and as a member of its subcommittee and in July, 1897, became president of the Chestnut Street National bank. President Cleveland appointed him in 1887 one of the three commissioners to investigate the Pacific railroad. Disagreeing with his two colleagues in the outcome of this work, Pattison submitted a minority report, which was adopted, and then refused to be an end to the partnership between the government and the Pacific railroads—a speedy and absolute divorce.

The forcing of a particularly objectionable candidate, George W. Davis, upon the Republican party in 1890, made a decided turning point in Pattison's political career. He saw great opportunity in the state. He was the only winner on the Democratic slate ticket in N.-J.

In 1892 the Pennsylvania delegation was bound by the rule unit to support Pattison, the predominant hope of the party which he was. Up to the time of his death Mr. Pattison was president of the Security Trust company. He was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal church. In 1872 he was married to Miss Anna Dryden Smith. They have had three daughters, one son, who died at six months, and his father's first term as governor. In 1890 he was again elected as a candidate for vice-president to go on the ticket with Bryan.

In 1892, for the third time, Mr. Pattison became his party's candidate for governor. This seven weeks' tour of the state done by him, in his sedan chair, followed, lost his physical condition much impaired appearance and for many months prior to the St. Louis national convention his health was evidently declining. In the state the Republican gubernatorial nominee, Judge Pennsylvania, received 593,035 votes and Pattison 430,675.

Ex-Governor Pattison was a delegate-at-large to the recent Democratic national convention. He represented Pennsylvania upon the platform committee and as a member of its subcommittee and in July, 1897, became president of the Chestnut Street National bank. President Cleveland appointed him in 1887 one of the three commissioners to investigate the Pacific railroad. Disagreeing with his two colleagues in the outcome of this work, Pattison submitted a minority report, which was adopted, and then refused to be an end to the partnership between the government and the Pacific railroads—a speedy and absolute divorce.

The forcing of a particularly objectionable candidate, George W. Davis, upon the Republican party in 1890, made a decided turning point in Pattison's political career. He saw great opportunity in the state. He was the only winner on the Democratic slate ticket in N.-J.

In 1892 the Pennsylvania delegation was bound by the rule unit to support Pattison, the predominant hope of the party which he was. Up to the time of his death Mr. Pattison was president of the Security Trust company. He was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal church. In 1872 he was married to Miss Anna Dryden Smith. They have had three daughters, one son, who died at six months, and his father's first term as governor. In 1890 he was again elected as a candidate for vice-president to go on the ticket with Bryan.

In 1892, for the third time, Mr. Pattison became his party's candidate for governor. This seven weeks' tour of the state done by him, in his sedan chair, followed, lost his physical condition much impaired appearance and for many months prior to the St. Louis national convention his health was evidently declining. In the state the Republican gubernatorial nominee, Judge Pennsylvania, received 593,035 votes and Pattison 430,675.

Ex-Governor Pattison was a delegate-at-large to the recent Democratic national convention. He represented Pennsylvania upon the platform committee and as a member of its subcommittee and in July, 1897, became president of the Chestnut Street National bank. President Cleveland appointed him in 1887 one of the three commissioners to investigate the Pacific railroad. Disagreeing with his two colleagues in the outcome of this work, Pattison submitted a minority report, which was adopted, and then refused to be an end to the partnership between the government and the Pacific railroads—a speedy and absolute divorce.

The forcing of a particularly objectionable candidate, George W. Davis, upon the Republican party in 1890, made a decided turning point in Pattison's political career. He saw great opportunity in the state. He was the only winner on the Democratic slate ticket in N.-J.

In 1892 the Pennsylvania delegation was bound by the rule unit to support Pattison, the predominant hope of the party which he was. Up to the time of his death Mr. Pattison was president of the Security Trust company. He was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal church. In 1872 he was married to Miss Anna Dryden Smith. They have had three daughters, one son, who died at six months, and his father's first term as governor. In 1890 he was again elected as a candidate for vice-president to go on the ticket with Bryan.

In 1892, for the third time, Mr. Pattison became his party's candidate for governor. This seven weeks' tour of the state done by him, in his sedan chair, followed, lost his physical condition much impaired appearance and for many months prior to the St. Louis national convention his health was evidently declining. In the state the Republican gubernatorial nominee, Judge Pennsylvania, received 593,035 votes and Pattison 430,675.

Ex-Governor Pattison was a delegate-at-large to the recent Democratic national convention. He represented Pennsylvania upon the platform committee and as a member of its sub-

SUDDENLY CALLED.

John A. Corle Summoned to His Reward.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

Brs. Mary Judy, Lewis Piper, Harry States and Mrs. Hannah White Also Have Passed Away.

Special Correspondence of The Gazette.

WASHINGTON, August 3.—It is the consensus of opinion at the national capital that in the lineup for battle between the two parties the Democracy has the better of the situation. It is believed here by the leaders of the party who have visited Washington since the convention in St. Louis that the outcome of the convention has practically solidified the Democratic party in this country. It looked for a time in St. Louis as if no power on earth could bring the two warring factions together. But conciliation and compromise on both sides have performed a political miracle and the old Democratic party is once more a solid phalanx and will move in unison in the cohorts of corruption and ex-ravagers in the Republican party. There are some people who criticize Mr. Bryan for his action in supporting Judge Parker and portions of the platform since the convention adjourned. But the truth of the matter is that Mr. Bryan has done more to help the ticket and hold his forces together for it than any one man in the country. If he had lain down immediately after the convention and accepted fully and entirely everything that was done, hundreds of thousands of his followers would have become angered at him, would have deserted him, and he would have lost his influence with them. He has held his ground and his former robust appearance and for many months prior to the St. Louis national convention his health was evidently declining. In the state the Republican gubernatorial nominee, Judge Pennsylvania, received 593,035 votes and Pattison 430,675.

Ex-Governor Pattison was a delegate-at-large to the recent Democratic national convention. He represented Pennsylvania upon the platform committee and as a member of its subcommittee and in July, 1897, became president of the Chestnut Street National bank. President Cleveland appointed him in 1887 one of the three commissioners to investigate the Pacific railroad. Disagreeing with his two colleagues in the outcome of this work, Pattison submitted a minority report, which was adopted, and then refused to be an end to the partnership between the government and the Pacific railroads—a speedy and absolute divorce.

The forcing of a particularly objectionable candidate, George W. Davis, upon the Republican party in 1890, made a decided turning point in Pattison's political career. He saw great opportunity in the state. He was the only winner on the Democratic slate ticket in N.-J.

In 1892 the Pennsylvania delegation was bound by the rule unit to support Pattison, the predominant hope of the party which he was. Up to the time of his death Mr. Pattison was president of the Security Trust company. He was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal church. In 1872 he was married to Miss Anna Dryden Smith. They have had three daughters, one son, who died at six months, and his father's first term as governor. In 1890 he was again elected as a candidate for vice-president to go on the ticket with Bryan.

In 1892, for the third time, Mr. Pattison became his party's candidate for governor. This seven weeks' tour of the state done by him, in his sedan chair, followed, lost his physical condition much impaired appearance and for many months prior to the St. Louis national convention his health was evidently declining. In the state the Republican gubernatorial nominee, Judge Pennsylvania, received 593,035 votes and Pattison 430,675.

Ex-Governor Pattison was a delegate-at-large to the recent Democratic national convention. He represented Pennsylvania upon the platform committee and as a member of its subcommittee and in July, 1897, became president of the Chestnut Street National bank. President Cleveland appointed him in 1887 one of the three commissioners to investigate the Pacific railroad. Disagreeing with his two colleagues in the outcome of this work, Pattison submitted a minority report, which was adopted, and then refused to be an end to the partnership between the government and the Pacific railroads—a speedy and absolute divorce.

The forcing of a particularly objectionable candidate, George W. Davis, upon the Republican party in 1890, made a decided turning point in Pattison's political career. He saw great opportunity in the state. He was the only winner on the Democratic slate ticket in N.-J.

In 1892 the Pennsylvania delegation was bound by the rule unit to support Pattison, the predominant hope of the party which he was. Up to the time of his death Mr. Pattison was president of the Security Trust company. He was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal church. In 1872 he was married to Miss Anna Dryden Smith. They have had three daughters, one son, who died at six months, and his father's first term as governor. In 1890 he was again elected as a candidate for vice-president to go on the ticket with Bryan.

In 1892, for the third time, Mr. Pattison became his party's candidate for governor. This seven weeks' tour of the state done by him, in his sedan chair, followed, lost his physical condition much impaired appearance and for many months prior to the St. Louis national convention his health was evidently declining. In the state the Republican gubernatorial nominee, Judge Pennsylvania, received 593,035 votes and Pattison 430,675.

Ex-Governor Pattison was a delegate-at-large to the recent Democratic national convention. He represented Pennsylvania upon the platform committee and as a member of its subcommittee and in July, 1897, became president of the Chestnut Street National bank. President Cleveland appointed him in 1887 one of the three commissioners to investigate the Pacific railroad. Disagreeing with his two colleagues in the outcome of this work, Pattison submitted a minority report, which was adopted, and then refused to be an end to the partnership between the government and the Pacific railroads—a speedy and absolute divorce.

The forcing of a particularly objectionable candidate, George W. Davis, upon the Republican party in 1890, made a decided turning point in Pattison's political career. He saw great opportunity in the state. He was the only winner on the Democratic slate ticket in N.-J.

In 1892 the Pennsylvania delegation was bound by the rule unit to support Pattison, the predominant hope of the party which he was. Up to the time of his death Mr. Pattison was president of the Security Trust company. He was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal church. In 1872 he was married to Miss Anna Dryden Smith. They have had three daughters, one son, who died at six months, and his father's first term as governor. In 1890 he was again elected as a candidate for vice-president to go on the ticket with Bryan.

In 1892, for the third time, Mr. Pattison became his party's candidate for governor. This seven weeks' tour of the state done by him, in his sedan chair, followed, lost his physical condition much impaired appearance and for many months prior to the St. Louis national convention his health was evidently declining. In the state the Republican gubernatorial nominee, Judge Pennsylvania, received 593,035 votes and Pattison 430,675.

Ex-Governor Pattison was a delegate-at-large to the recent Democratic national convention. He represented Pennsylvania upon the platform committee and as a member of its subcommittee and in July, 1897, became president of the Chestnut Street National bank. President Cleveland appointed him in 1887 one of the three commissioners to investigate the Pacific railroad. Disagreeing with his two colleagues in the outcome of this work, Pattison submitted a minority report, which was adopted, and then refused to be an end to the partnership between the government and the Pacific railroads—a speedy and absolute divorce.

The forcing of a particularly objectionable candidate, George W. Davis, upon the Republican party in 1890, made a decided turning point in Pattison's political career. He saw great opportunity in the state. He was the only winner on the Democratic slate ticket in N.-J.

In 1892 the Pennsylvania delegation was bound by the rule unit to support Pattison, the predominant hope of the party which he was. Up to the time of his death Mr. Pattison was president of the Security Trust company. He was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal church. In 1872 he was married to Miss Anna Dryden Smith. They have had three daughters, one son, who died at six months, and his father's first term as governor. In 1890 he was again elected as a candidate for vice-president to go on the ticket with Bryan.

In 1892, for the third time, Mr. Pattison became his party's candidate for governor. This seven weeks' tour of the state done by him, in his sedan chair, followed, lost his physical condition much impaired appearance and for many months prior to the St. Louis national convention his health was evidently declining. In the state the Republican gubernatorial nominee, Judge Pennsylvania, received 593,035 votes and Pattison 430,675.

Ex-Governor Pattison was a delegate-at-large to the recent Democratic national convention. He represented Pennsylvania upon the platform committee and as a member of its subcommittee and in July, 1897, became president of the Chestnut Street National bank. President Cleveland appointed him in 1887 one of the three commissioners to investigate the Pacific railroad. Disagreeing with his two colleagues in the outcome of this work, Pattison submitted a minority report, which was adopted, and then refused to be an end to the partnership between the government and the Pacific railroads—a speedy and absolute divorce.

The forcing of a particularly objectionable candidate, George W. Davis, upon the Republican party in 1890, made a decided turning point in Pattison's political career. He saw great opportunity in the state. He was the only winner on the Democratic slate ticket in N.-J.

In 1892 the Pennsylvania delegation was bound by the rule unit to support Pattison, the predominant hope of the party which he was. Up to the time of his death Mr. Pattison was president of the Security Trust company. He was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal church. In 1872 he was married to Miss Anna Dryden Smith. They have had three daughters, one son, who died at six months, and his father's first term as governor. In 1890 he was again elected as a candidate for vice-president to go on the ticket with Bryan.

In 1892, for the third time, Mr. Pattison became his party's candidate for governor. This seven weeks' tour of the state done by him, in his sedan chair, followed, lost his physical condition much impaired appearance and for many months prior to the St. Louis national convention his health was evidently declining. In the state the Republican gubernatorial nominee, Judge Pennsylvania, received 593,035 votes and Pattison 430,675.

Ex-Governor Pattison was a delegate-at-large to the recent Democratic national convention. He represented Pennsylvania upon the platform committee and as a member of its subcommittee and in July, 1897, became president of the Chestnut Street National bank. President Cleveland appointed him in 1887 one of the three commissioners to investigate the Pacific railroad. Disagreeing with his two colleagues in the outcome of this work, Pattison submitted a minority report, which was adopted, and then refused to be an end to the partnership between the government and the Pacific railroads—a speedy and absolute divorce.

The forcing of a particularly objectionable candidate, George W. Davis, upon the Republican party in 1890, made a decided turning point in Pattison's political career. He saw great opportunity in the state. He was the only winner on the Democratic slate ticket in N.-J.

In 1892 the Pennsylvania delegation was bound by the rule unit to support Pattison, the predominant hope of the party which he was. Up to the time of his death Mr. Pattison was president of the Security Trust company. He was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal church. In 1872 he was married to Miss Anna Dryden Smith. They have had three daughters, one son, who died at six months, and his father's first term as governor. In 1890 he was again elected as a candidate for vice-president to go on the ticket with Bryan.

In 1892, for the third time, Mr. Pattison became his party's candidate for governor. This seven weeks' tour of the state done by him, in his sedan chair, followed, lost his physical condition much impaired appearance and for many months prior to the St. Louis national convention his health was evidently declining. In the state the Republican gubernatorial nominee, Judge Pennsylvania, received 593,035 votes and Pattison 430,675.

Ex-Governor Pattison was a delegate-at-large to the recent Democratic national convention. He represented Pennsylvania upon the platform committee and as a member of its subcommittee and in July, 1897, became president of the Chestnut Street National bank. President Cleveland appointed him in 1887 one of the three commissioners to investigate the Pacific railroad. Disagreeing with his two colleagues in the outcome of this work, Pattison submitted a minority report, which was adopted, and then refused to be an end to the partnership between the government and the Pacific railroads—a speedy and absolute divorce.

The forcing of a particularly objectionable candidate, George W. Davis, upon the Republican party in 1890, made a decided turning point in Pattison's political career. He saw great opportunity in the state. He was the only winner on the Democratic slate ticket in N.-J.

In 1892 the Pennsylvania delegation was bound by the rule unit to support Pattison, the predominant hope of the party which he was. Up to the time of his death Mr. Pattison was president of the Security Trust company. He was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal church. In 1872 he was married to Miss Anna Dryden Smith. They have had three daughters, one son, who died at six months, and his father's first term as governor. In 1890 he was again elected as a candidate for vice-president to go on the ticket with Bryan.

In 1892, for the third time, Mr. Pattison became his party's candidate for governor. This seven weeks' tour of the state done by him, in his sedan chair, followed, lost his physical condition much impaired appearance and for many months prior to the St. Louis national convention his health was evidently declining. In the state the Republican gubernatorial nominee, Judge Pennsylvania, received 593,035 votes and Pattison 430,675.

Bedford Gazette

Established In 1805.

J. F. HARCLEROKE, Editors and
S. A. VAN ORMER, Proprietors

The GAZETTE is the leading newspaper of Bedford county and its circulation is far ahead of any of its contemporaries. As an advertising medium it is one of the best in this part of the state.

THE GAZETTE IS A MODEL AMONG COUNTRY NEWSPAPERS.—New York World. Regular subscription price per year... $3.00. If paid in advance.....$2.50. All communications should be addressed to THE GAZETTE PUBLISHING CO., BEDFORD, PA.

Friday Morning, August 5, 1904.

Democratic Ticket.

NATIONAL.

President,
HON. ALTON B. PARKER, of New York.
Vice President,
HON. HENRY G. DAVIS, of West Virginia.

STATE.

Judge of the Supreme Court,
HON. SAMUEL GUSINE THOMPSON, of Philadelphia.

COUNTY.

Associate Judge,
JAMES L. TENLEY, of Broad Top Township.
Representative in the General Assembly,
HON. EDMUND S. DOTY, of Bedford Borough.
J. W. BUCHANAN, of Londonderry Township.
Director of the Poor,
FRANK M. BIXLER, of Wolfsburg.
County Surveyor,
G. W. BLACKBURN, of New Paris.

CAMPAIGN OF 1904.

Dates for Democratic Workers to Remember:

Last Day

For Registering Voters.....Wednesday, September 1.

For Filing Taxe.....Saturday, October 3.

For Filing Certificates of Nomination (State, County, National). September 27.

(State Oct 2nd).

For Filing Nomination Papers (County, National). Tuesday, October 4.

For Filing Nomination Papers (County Office). Thursday, October 6.

Election Day Tuesday, November 8.

TODAY THE GAZETTE is 99 years old. During the past year its circulation has greatly increased and it still maintains the lead it has always held over its contemporaries in the county. This is proof positive that THE GAZETTE's untiring efforts to gather the news of country, state and nation and its custom of presenting it clearly and accurately is appreciated by our readers. On the threshold of a new year it is gratifying to be able to state that the circulation of THE GAZETTE is larger than ever before in its history and that its business is more prosperous—for all of which we sincerely thank the many of good friends and true who have been loyal to the paper through storm and sunshine, and pledge them that we shall do our part to merit their support in the future.

On Monday S. A. CHANGE OF FIRM, Van Ormer, son of Dr. W. W. Van Ormer, of Schellerville, burg, and formerly principal of the public schools at Rainier and Sixton, purchased the late E. F. Kerr's interest in THE GAZETTE. Mr. Kerr was a founder of the paper. Mr. Van Ormer is an intelligent, progressive and capable young man and an ardent Democrat. The change in the ownership of THE GAZETTE will not change its policy. It will continue, as it has done during the past 98 years, to loyally and earnestly support the principles of the Democratic party; it will be devoted to the interests of Bedford county and her people and will do its utmost to advance their welfare; it will be just to all men and fair in its comments on public questions and in its discussions will always present facts and tell the truth.

THE DEMOCRATIC national committee's selection of ARE BRIGHT, Thomas Taggart, of Indianapolis, as its chairman will be commanded by all members of the party who have the welfare of the organization at heart.

Mr. Taggart has the tact and talents of a political general. The committee did not make the choice until after it had held a prolonged conference and carefully considered the merits of the men who were available, at which meeting plans for an aggressive campaign were outlined. The action of these representatives of the Democracy is an earnest of the vigorous and intelligent manner in which the party will wage warfare upon the champion of the trusts and the worshiper at the shrine of the false god. Protection, through whose dispensation foreigners can buy American-made goods cheaper than our own people. It is fortunate that a man from the middle west should be chosen to lead the Democratic hosts, and peculiarly fitting that he should come from Indiana, whose electoral vote will be necessary for a national victory.

But aside from the importance of his place of residence, Tom Taggart is still an ideal selection. He is a past master in politics, resourceful, of pleasing personality and always aims to obtain practical results. He is an experienced and successful business man and uses business methods in his political work. As far as resources and energy go, Chairman Taggart has been placed in the same class with the late Senator Hanna, but he enters upon his duties with more experience than that astute Republican leader had when he conducted the campaign of 1896.

Tom Taggart has proved his mettle, and, with the army of able assistants he will have, will lead his party to a glorious victory. Already the signs of the times presage the election of the Democratic candidates. Never before was the party so united and hopeful; never before were stronger, abler or more popular candidates chosen by any party; never before did a political organization enter upon a campaign under more suspicious circumstances. Even some of the Republican politicians and papers are catching the spirit of the hour and are admitting, some of them, that the Republicans will not have the walk-over they have been gloating over, while others frankly confess their belief that the Democrats will win this year.

The Milwaukee Wisconsin, an ardent Republican paper, referring to Senator Platt's "through his hat" prediction that "Roosevelt will defeat Parker as easily as Grant defeated McClellan in 1872," says:

"Senator Platt's opinion is not a well-grounded judgment, as Grant was far more popular than Roosevelt ever was, and Greeley was not so popular as Parker. The Democratic party is now united from Maine to Texas and to the Pacific coast. Four weeks ago such a union was deemed impossible. The platform of the Democratic combination is also much stronger than that which was enunciated in 1872 for Greeley. In fact it looks as if a sharp battle must be fought to elect Roosevelt and Fairbanks. So easy to Republicans, do not be too confident. It will require vigilance, work and good management to carry in the Democratic national ticket. The declaration of Parker in favor of a gold standard has helped him immensely in the commercial and manufacturing states."

Ex-Governor Kellogg, of Louisiana, now a resident of Washington, is a dyed-in-the-wool Republican, but he candidly confesses that he believes the Democrats will win this year. In an interview with a Charleston paper he said:

"The Democrats have started out on an aggressive campaign and I look for sharp and sturdy fighting at every point along our lines. Of course many of our people do not agree with the view I take of the situation. To be perfectly frank I cannot explain definitely why I entertain this feeling that the Democrats are likely to overthrow us at the polls next November. Nevertheless, I have the same forebodings now that I had when Cleveland defeated Harrison."

"In addition to President Roosevelt's unpopularity with the party leaders there is much uncertainty about the policy he will pursue in case of his re-election. The country is restless under his administration of public affairs, and conservative business interests would welcome a change such as they believe would come with the election of Judge Parker. Judge Parker is a stronger nominee than Cleveland would have been. I know him personally and predict that he will grow stronger every day the campaign progresses. He is a man of unimpeachable character and there is nothing in his political record upon which to base an attack. Had the Democrats nominated Cleveland, as some of the independents urged, he would have been attacked on the third-term issue and because of other political weaknesses he displayed during his two administrations in the White House.

"I realize that this does not sound very encouraging coming from a Republican, but I am perfectly sincere in this opinion of Judge Parker's strength, and I will not be surprised if there should come a Democratic landslide which would carry with it the house of representatives."

In 1892 Governor Kellogg predicted the defeat of President Harrison, when the rank and file of his party were cool enough of his election. As the Pittsburgh Post says, "whether his prediction this year will prove equally accurate it indicates the opinion held by many Republicans but expressed by few."

Found 30,000 Old Pennies.

An old nail keg was recently unearthed in one of our western cities by workmen engaged in tearing down an old building. Upon opening it they became very jubilant as it was full of pennies, their joy was soon turned to disappointment for on closer examination they were found to be commercial pennies, used during the war, and of no value now, whatever. The above has been the experience of sixty men and women who were deceived into trying various remedies to restore them to health, but because they contained no medicine were greatly disappointed.

Not so, however, with those who selected Hostetter's Stomach Bitters to cure them of bronchitis, indigestion, dyspepsia, or malaria, fever and ague, for today they enjoy perfect health. A trial will convince you.

Agents Wanted.

The result of the election will be foreshadowed in the World's advance, exactly as Cleveland's election was foretold and as McKinley's triumph was. The World giving the electoral vote by states with absolute correctness ten weeks before McKinley's election day.

The World will not only strive to be right, but it will be bright and large, national in its news and views. Every one who is interested in this vital presidential contest will see it every day. No Democrat or Republican should be happy without it.

The regular price for the daily morning World by mail is $2 for four months, but for a special time the World will send the daily morning edition by mail for four months $1.

Agents are wanted to take subscriptions. A liberal commission will be given. Address World Campaign Club, Room 40, Pulitzer Building, N. Y.

Terms: subscription blank, sample copies, printed matter, &c., will be sent by return of mail.

One Minute Cough Cure
For Coughs, Colds and Croup.

that astute Republican leader had

BROADBRIM'S BUDGET

Number One Thousand Four Hundred and Nineteen.

LABOR AND CAPITAL.

An Enigma Which No Prophet Can Solve—Cost of Amusements—The War in the East.

Special Correspondence of THE GAZETTE. NEW YORK AUGUST 3—If the foundation of a great war between labor and capital is realized it will cause more distress and suffering than any contest that has taken place between these two contending powers. There are only two great forms of government which have been elected for their safety, one is reason and the other is force. Force seems to be the usual result for the arbitration of these great questions, for they appeal to everyone, rich or poor, high or low, educated or ignorant, and all these subjects appeal directly to every man's safety, in the comforts of his home, and the well-being of his children. It is safe to say that one year in, no man who professes, wants his home sacredly guarded and is willing to pledge his life for these blessings. For a veral months there has been a feeling of unrest among the laboring classes which bodes no good to capital. Honest labor deserves the ordinary comforts of life, a picture on the wall, a carpet on the floor, decent dress and education for his children and these union was deemed impossible. The platform of the Democratic combination is also much stronger than that which was enunciated in 1872 for Greeley. In fact it looks as if a sharp battle must be fought to elect Roosevelt and Fairbanks. So easy to Republicans, do not be too confident. It will require vigilance, work and good management to carry in the Democratic national ticket. The declaration of Parker in favor of a gold standard has helped him immensely in the commercial and manufacturing states."

Ex-Governor Kellogg, of Louisiana, now a resident of Washington, is a dyed-in-the-wool Republican, but he candidly confesses that he believes the Democrats will win this year. In an interview with a Charleston paper he said:

"The Democrats have started out on an aggressive campaign and I look for sharp and sturdy fighting at every point along our lines. Of course many of our people do not agree with the view I take of the situation. To be perfectly frank I cannot explain definitely why I entertain this feeling that the Democrats are likely to overthrow us at the polls next November. Nevertheless, I have the same forebodings now that I had when Cleveland defeated Harrison."

"In addition to President Roosevelt's unpopularity with the party leaders there is much uncertainty about the policy he will pursue in case of his re-election. The country is restless under his administration of public affairs, and conservative business interests would welcome a change such as they believe would come with the election of Judge Parker. Judge Parker is a stronger nominee than Cleveland would have been. I know him personally and predict that he will grow stronger every day the campaign progresses. He is a man of unimpeachable character and there is nothing in his political record upon which to base an attack. Had the Democrats nominated Cleveland, as some of the independents urged, he would have been attacked on the third-term issue and because of other political weaknesses he displayed during his two administrations in the White House.

"I realize that this does not sound very encouraging coming from a Republican, but I am perfectly sincere in this opinion of Judge Parker's strength, and I will not be surprised if there should come a Democratic landslide which would carry with it the house of representatives."

In 1892 Governor Kellogg predicted the defeat of President Harrison, when the rank and file of his party were cool enough of his election. As the Pittsburgh Post says, "whether his prediction this year will prove equally accurate it indicates the opinion held by many Republicans but expressed by few."

Found 30,000 Old Pennies.

An old nail keg was recently unearthed in one of our western cities by workmen engaged in tearing down an old building.

Upon opening it they became very jubilant as it was full of pennies, their joy was soon turned to disappointment for on closer examination they were found to be commercial pennies, used during the war, and of no value now, whatever.

The above has been the experience of sixty men and women who were deceived into trying various remedies to restore them to health, but because they contained no medicine were greatly disappointed.

Not so, however, with those who selected Hostetter's Stomach Bitters to cure them of bronchitis, indigestion, dyspepsia, or malaria, fever and ague, for today they enjoy perfect health. A trial will convince you.

Agents Wanted.

The result of the election will be foreshadowed in the World's advance, exactly as Cleveland's election was foretold and as McKinley's triumph was. The World giving the electoral vote by states with absolute correctness ten weeks before McKinley's election day.

The World will not only strive to be right, but it will be bright and large, national in its news and views. Every one who is interested in this vital presidential contest will see it every day. No Democrat or Republican should be happy without it.

The regular price for the daily morning World by mail is $2 for four months, but for a special time the World will send the daily morning edition by mail for four months $1.

Agents are wanted to take subscriptions. A liberal commission will be given. Address World Campaign Club, Room 40, Pulitzer Building, N. Y.

Terms: subscription blank, sample copies, printed matter, &c., will be sent by return of mail.

One Minute Cough Cure
For Coughs, Colds and Croup.

that astute Republican leader had waves;" that is as far as Russia is concerned; but the czar must remember that Brother Jonathan has interests there also and he always stands ready to protect his rights either on the sea or land.

BROADBRIM'S BUDGET

Sale of Peruna for Dyspepsia With Great Benefit.

Ex-Soldier Prevented.

The startling announcement that a preventive of suicide had been discovered will interest many. A run down system, or despondency invariably precedes suicide and something has been found that will prevent that condition which makes suicide likely. At the first thought of self destruction take Electric Stethos. It being a great tonic and nerves will strengthen the nerves and build up the system. It's a great St. John, Liver and Kidney regulator. Only 50c. Saturation guaranteed by J. R. Irvine & Co. Drugs.

Foley's Kidney Cure will cure all diseases arising from diseased kidneys or bladder. Sold by Ed. Beckerman.

Intersession S. S. Lesson for August 7.

GOD TAKING CARE OF ELIJAH. 1 Kings 17:1-6 Read chapter. Golden Text.—"He earnest for you" 1 Peter 5:7.

Elijah, the Tishbite, who was of the inhabitants of Gilead, sold unto Abrahah the God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be few to rain these years, but according to my word." And the word of the Lord came unto him, saying, "Get thee hence and turn to the eastward and bid thyself by the brook Cherith that is before Jordan. And it shall be that thou shalt drink of the brook and I will command the ravens to feed thee there."

So he went and did according to the word of the Lord; for he went and dwelt by the brook Cherith, which belonged to Zidon, and dwelt there, behold, I have commanded the ravens to feed thee there to sustain thee. So he arose and went to Zephath. And when he came to the gate of the city, behold, the widow woman was there gathering sticks and he called to her and said, "Fetch me, I pray thee, a little water in a vessel, that I may wash my hands and dress thee for to eat my son, that we may eat it, and die."

And Elijah said to her, "Fear not; go and do as thou hast said, but make me thereof a little cake first and bring it unto me; and after make for thee and for thy son." For thus saith the Lord God of Israel, "The barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the oil of oil fail, until the day that the Lord setteth his seal upon the earth."

And she went and did according to the word of Elijah and he said, "Bring me thyself a morsel of bread in thine hand." And she said, "As the Lord God liveth, I have not a cake, but a little oil in a cruse and, behold, I am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it for my son and my son, that we may eat it, and die."

And Elijah said to her, "Fear not; go and do as thou hast said, but make me thereof a little cake first and bring it unto me; and after make for thee and for thy son." For thus saith the Lord God of Israel, "The barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the oil of oil fail, until the day that the Lord setteth his seal upon the earth."

And she went and did according to the word of Elijah and he said, "Bring me thyself a morsel of bread in thine hand." And she said, "As the Lord God liveth, I have not a cake, but a little oil in a cruse and, behold, I am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it for my son and my son, that we may eat it, and die."

And she went and did according to the word of Elijah and he said, "Bring me thyself a morsel of bread in thine hand." And she said, "As the Lord God liveth, I have not a cake, but a little oil in a cruse and, behold, I am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it for my son and my son, that we may eat it, and die."

And she went and did according to the word of Elijah and he said, "Bring me thyself a morsel of bread in thine hand." And she said, "As the Lord God liveth, I have not a cake, but a little oil in a cruse and, behold, I am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it for my son and my son, that we may eat it, and die."

And she went and did according to the word of Elijah and he said, "Bring me thyself a morsel of bread in thine hand." And she said, "As the Lord God liveth, I have not a cake, but a little oil in a cruse and, behold, I am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it for my son and my son, that we may eat it, and die."

And she went and did according to the word of Elijah and he said, "Bring me thyself a morsel of bread in thine hand." And she said, "As the Lord God liveth, I have not a cake, but a little oil in a cruse and, behold, I am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it for my son and my son, that we may eat it, and die."

And she went and did according to the word of Elijah and he said, "Bring me thyself a morsel of bread in thine hand." And she said, "As the Lord God liveth, I have not a cake, but a little oil in a cruse and, behold, I am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it for my son and my son, that we may eat it, and die."

And she went and did according to the word of Elijah and he said, "Bring me thyself a morsel of bread in thine hand." And she said, "As the Lord God liveth, I have not a cake, but a little oil in a cruse and, behold, I am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it for my son and my son, that we may eat it, and die."

And she went and did according to the word of Elijah and he said, "Bring me thyself a morsel of bread in thine hand." And she said, "As the Lord God liveth, I have not a cake

